Colour %

This is not color proportion for each composition, but instead how often a color is seen throughout the brand system.

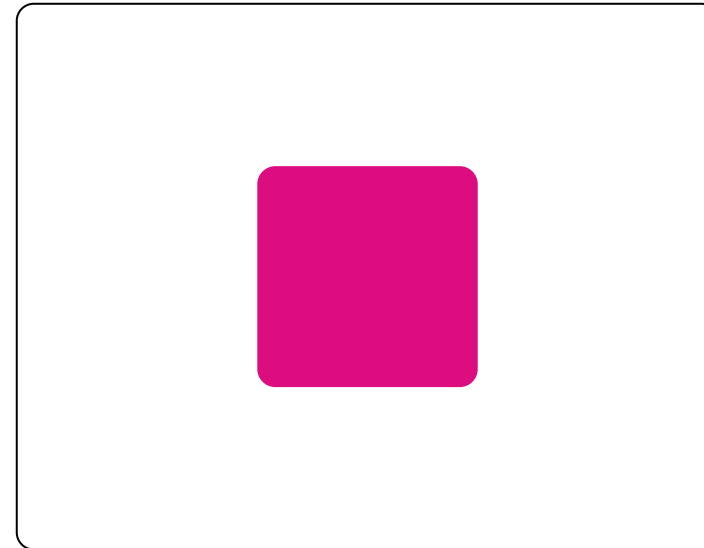

Color is organized here by size — the bigger the bar, the more it should be used in our identity.

Light colors provide fresh air as backgrounds for heavy-content layouts.

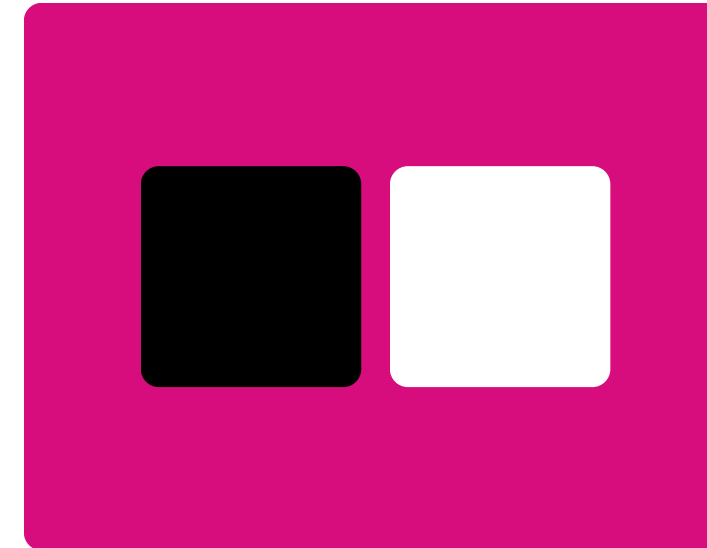

Color Dont's

The brand colors are free to use and combine, but there are restrictions to preserve legibility and a good color balance across all brand assets and artwork.

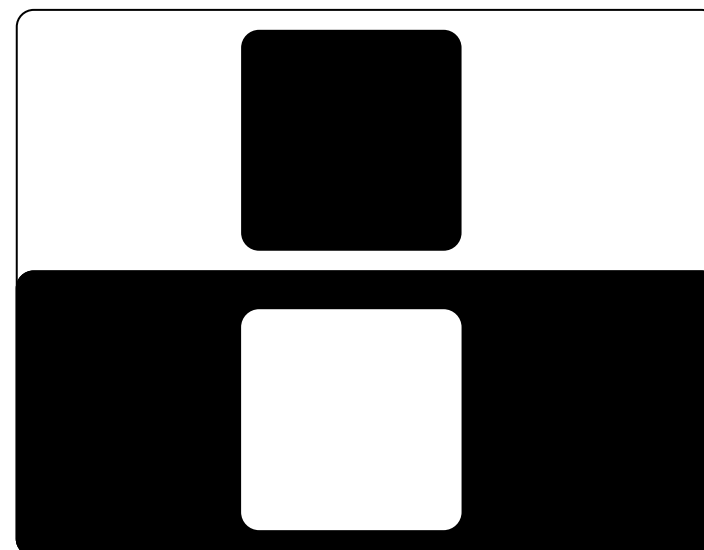

Do not use white backgrounds and mono color

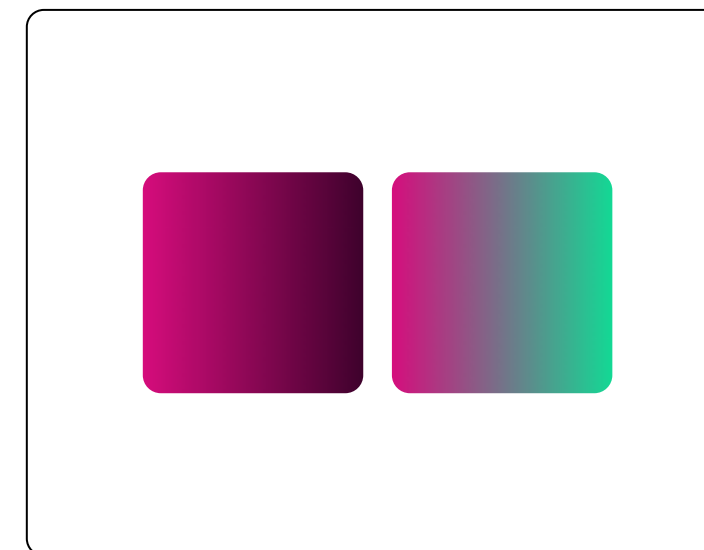

Avoid black or white on the brand magenta as backgrounds

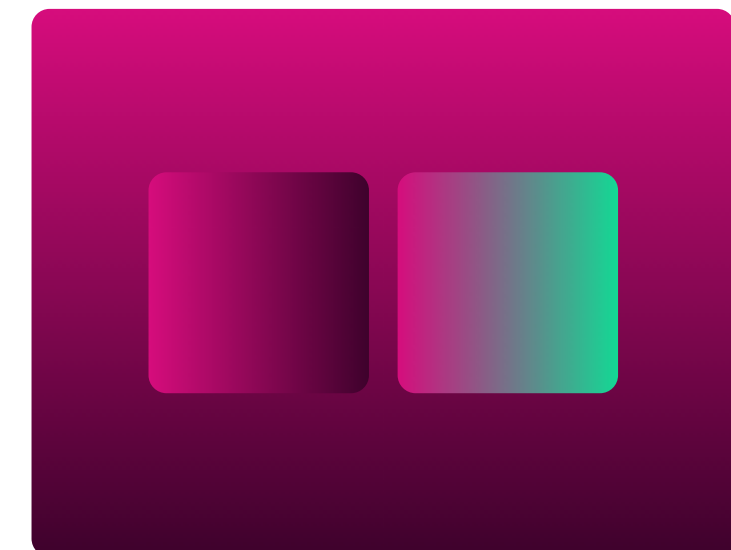

Do not use light, low-contrast combinations

Avoid black & white compositions

Don't use multiple gradients

Don't use gradients on gradients

Recommended Color Usage

The palette is wide, but we recommend not using every color at once in the same piece of artwork.

It's ideal to combine up to 3 colors, especially for simpler pieces. Here are examples of how to mix Mint To Prosper colors.

Icon system

All icons used within a single PurposeMint design should follow one consistent visual style.

- If outline icons are used, all icons should be outlined.
- If filled icons are used, all icons should be filled.
- If colored icons are used, the same color treatment and visual approach should be applied consistently across the icon set.
- Avoid mixing outline, filled, multicolored, or different icon styles within the same composition.

Consistency creates a cleaner, more cohesive, and recognizable visual system.

Brand Graphic Elements

PurposeMint uses distinctive flowing line artwork as part of its visual identity. These organic, dynamic forms can be placed around the corners, edges, or background of a composition to add movement, energy, and visual recognition.

The artwork should support the main content rather than compete with it. It can be cropped, scaled, or positioned differently depending on the layout while maintaining its original visual character.
